Nesoi Tee
Miriam Felton

We held two strands of HiKoo® Alpaca Lace Light together throughout to create this easy, breezy tee that is sure to please!

While the pattern does not suggest double stranding, we did as Alpaca Lace Light is quite a thin lace weight yarn.
Do you see the little dragons?
The wings?
The pointy heads?

Wrap yourself in gentle lace shawl and feel warm in any time and circumstances: in a cool summer evenings, in an air conditioned office or evening theater’s performance.

You would not make too far without being complemented on your shawl.”
- Irina Eberhardt
“Mares' tails, more commonly known as cirrus uncinus, is derived from Latin, meaning “curly hooks”. These clouds are generally sparse in the sky and very thin. This shawl reflects this image with it's sparse use of a small lace motif and textural body.

Knit in this beautiful ‘Nebula’ colorway in HiKoo® Alpaca Lace Light, it’s like a summer breeze on your shoulders and neck!”

- Katie Rempe
The shawl is knit in one piece - the center and edgings are worked simultaneously, so when it's done - it's done.

Dedicated to the memory of my maternal grandmother, Giovannina (Jennie) Bua Palmeri. Part of a series of lace designs celebrating women in my family. Others include Sahar and Pauline.

“Starting at a single point and growing, shifting and fading into a piece that begs to be wrapped up in. This asymmetrical triangle shawl uses some clever increasing and decreasing, combined with relaxing garter stitch and simple lace so that you have a fun-to-knit canvas to play with mixing colors on! This shawl is all about making it your own. Let your creativity shine!!” - Andrea Mowry

“This amazing wrap is worked from both ends towards the centre with a super fun chevron construction, and joined as you work (no seaming or kitchener required!).

The possible combinations for this wrap are so vast, and the achieved results can be so diverse... ANY color combination will work and will give you a beautiful piece, but remember this will be a big wrap and you will want to wear it. So go for colors that compliment your wardrobe and you feel happy and beautiful in!”

- Joji Locatelli

Kate’s Everyday Sweater

Designer: The Chilly Dog
Yarn: CoBaSi Plus by HiKoo®

"I was giddy when my adult daughter asked if I would design a sweater especially for her. She had a very specific list of requirements: Something that can be worn every day, machine washable, rounded neckline that’s not too tight, flattering shape with small splits at the sides, sleeves that aren’t too short, textured stitchwork, pretty color. I think I nailed it!"

- Ellen Thomas, The Chilly Dog

- 2 hank CC (shown in #1019 - Spruce)

“This pattern is super playful, silly, and definitely will get people talking... especially if they came over to your house to see you anyway. It’s a fun way to be able to add personality and decoration to your home with your crochet skills.” - Divine Debris
“Make a simple but cleverly constructed hat that brings out the beauty of this Gradient yarn.

This hat is a quick knit that even adventurous beginners will be able to master. The name? The angled stripes reminded me of the fields surrounding our village.

This is a beanie pattern. If you prefer a slouchier hat or one that you can fold up, have a look at Langfield.”

- Martina Behm
Easy
Martina Behm

"Shawlettes in garter stitch are my favorite: They look great in a colorful yarn, they are squishy and warm your neck, and they are so easy to knit that even beginners will enjoy making them. This shawlette is named “Easy” because it is just that: So simple to knit, but the biased construction and change of knitting direction will bring out the best of a multicolored yarn. It is long and skinny and can be wrapped around several times, or tied with a knot.”

Blunk the Hat
Designer: Martina Behm
Yarn: Zauberball® Crazy by Schoppel

“When I invented the “Tensfield” and “Langfield” hats, my focus was on a seamless hat that could be adjusted to the wearer’s head during the knitting. My family and I are super-fond of our hats and wear them all the time – but my geometrically inclined mind would not stop reasoning until it found a way to make such a hat that would also be symmetrical. So here is Blunk, a cousin to the Tensfield hat that you will certainly enjoy knitting, too! As usual, you can use anything you have in your stash as gauge does not matter at all, and you can adjust it to a newborn’s head as well as to your own. This hat will turn out particularly nice in a handspun yarn with long color changes. The name? “Blunk” is the village next to Tensfeld, right around the corner from Damsdorf, my home.

The hat is knit modularly, there are no seams. Gaps on top are closed using a three-needle bind-off. As all hats, it is 3-dimensional.” - Martina Behm

“Have you ever been intimidated to “join as you go”? There’s no fear here! In this pattern, you will learn how to join motifs “as you go” for a seamless finish!

This bright and fun wrap has a lacy ripple body. It’s a thrill to watch the colors change and the various stitches keeps things interesting.”

“Make a hat that will fit anyone from baby to adult! No matter what kind of yarn you use, what size your head is or what gauge you are knitting at: This hat is adjusted as you go, you can make it tight or a little looser, and you can also choose how long you want it to be. Fold it up or wear it slouchy-style.

The interesting 3-dimensional construction looks particularly good in a gradient yarn or your very own handspun, or use scraps of sock yarn. Anything will work! This is a sister pattern to my beanie hat pattern “Tensfield”. “Langfield” is a slouchy hat.”

“When I first started thinking about this design and what I wanted, I stumbled over a photograph of a whale shark and its fascinating patterning. I looked at many other pictures, but somehow kept coming back to this one.

This shawl is my take on translating this graphic pattern into knitwear—its wavy lines, its dots and the fluid overall impression.”

- Melanie Berg
